What I See

*Created By:

What I see is a distance plane and space that man once called his home,
Where the tools of success are generated from the flesh of the human hands,
A place where normalcy is self-reliance and without the complexities of technological devices.

What I see is a vortex of new innovations,
Where its force dehumanized and materialized the most educated of men,
Causing them to delusion the concept of needs versus wants. Manipulating the mind to chase an endless dream.

What I see is myself drifting deep into the vortex,
Where my mind is force to submit to the current of time,
Replacing the plane that I once knew with the world of cyberspace.
